The Beantown Girls by Jane Healey

Did any of your history books talk about Clubmobiles when you studied WWII history? These Red Cross large trucks were driven by women who went from troop to troop giving out doughnuts and coffee to raise the morale of the troops. Their job was to look beautiful, share a laugh and a smile, and help soldiers feel a little bit of happiness in the middle of a war. Many of them put themselves in harms way and some Clubmobile girls even received Bronze Stars. Jane Healey's book is fiction, but much of it is based on true stories the real Red Cross Clumobile girls documented in diaries, letters, pictures, and interviews. This historical fiction book is about love, hope, friendship, and the resilience of the human spirit. Connie randyandconnieanderson@gmail.com
